Guatemala report 2016

If teachers have not developed ICT-skills and abilities, how can they guide and accompany students in this technological-digital quest?

Through digital storytelling ...

participants develop their capacities for video and audio editing, writing, analysing, summarising, and the structuring of thoughts and ideas, designed for use as a pedagogical tool inside and outside the classroom.

- Adapting to new motivations and interests of teachers

- A situation that implies new roles and skills for students and teachers

COMUNDOS

By telling stories we bring reflective skills that contribute (empirically proven) to happiness, empowerment and identity development.

Digital storytelling

- Students use cell phones to make the material (audio / images) and share messages on the Internet.
- It is not just about learning the knowledge and computer skills but developing media literacy with a focus on the use of knowledge and skills in a relevant way.
- This technique is useful for different audiences with different learning levels.
